ABOUT NATURAL BRIDGE - Mecoure mechin kihoe is a Monacan greeting meaning, "You are welcome to be here." By visiting Natural Bridge State Park, you join a distinguished group. To Monacan Indians, the area's first inhabitants, this was sacred land. To Thomas Jefferson, who owned the property in 1774, this land was a source of inspiration and wonder. To frontiersmen, including Daniel Boone and Sam Houston, who passed by on the Great Wagon Road, this was a gateway to the West.

Learn more about those people from interpreters along Cedar Creek Trail.

GIFT SHOP AND ARTISAN CENTER - Visit our gift shop inside the visitor center. Tickets to see the bridge and caverns can be purchased, as can memorabilia of your visit. The gift shop offers a wide variety of apparel and souvenirs. Our consignment center houses local artisan's crafts. Paintings, mugs and jewelry are just a sample of the fine crafts offered.

NATURE PROGRAMS AND GUIDED HIKES - Check in at the park's visitor center to find out about special activities during your visit. Special state and national programs are scheduled throughout the year. Pack a lunch or enjoy a meal at the snack bar while you are at the park.

MONACAN INDIAN VILLAGE - Walk 500 yards from the Cedar Creek Cafe, along the Cedar Creek Trail, and visit a Monacan Indian outdoor exhibit, a living history experience. The village is open 10 a.m. – dusk, April – Thanksgiving.

GEOLOGY - The bridge itself is one of the oldest geologic features on the East Coast. The limestone base consists of compressed remains of organisms that lived in the seas during the Ordovician period of the Paleozoic era nearly 500 million years ago. When the nearby James River was formed 200 million years ago, the bridge was part of an underground cave system. Eventually, water changed course, and the cave collapsed, leaving only the thickest part of a ceiling - the bridge we see today.
